PRESENTATION

My name is Michele Paolino, I'm a web designer and front-end developer. My job involves designing and developing modern, lightweight, and high-performance web solutions. I apply to my works the knowledge I have gained from studying the processes that govern visual communication in its formal and functional aspects.

WORK EXPERIENCES

Dopolavoro

Web developer

My primary responsibility at Dopolavoro centered on a critical translation process: transforming the studio's meticulously developed visual identities into fully realized websites and web applications. This role demanded an exceptional level of precision in preserving the nuanced visual language conceived by the design team while ensuring optimal digital functionality. I specialized in creating digital experiences that were not just technically sound, but true visual narratives, seamlessly converting complex brand identities into interactive, responsive web solutions that maintained the studio's renowned design excellence.

Sari Advertising

Web designer & developer

At Sari Advertising I was a driving force in high-velocity e-commerce web development, successfully delivering up to 20 fully functional e-commerce websites annually. My role extended beyond technical implementation, as I coordinated cross-functional teams of designers and copywriters to ensure cohesive project execution. By carefully managing these creative professionals, I transformed complex client requirements into strategically crafted digital storefronts that maximized SEO performance and user conversion rates. This approach demanded a unique blend of technical expertise, team leadership, and marketing insight, allowing me to create e-commerce platforms that were both technically robust and commercially compelling.

Becoming Lab

Web designer & developer

At Becoming Lab, I took full ownership of client relationships, managing every aspect of web development projects from initial consultation to final delivery. My approach went beyond traditional design and development, positioning me as a comprehensive point of contact who handled client interactions with good care and strategic insight. I independently managed client communications, deeply understanding their unique business objectives and translating those insights into tailored web applications and marketing solutions that precisely aligned with their brand identity.
